

ERRATUM

On page 16 of Volume 11, No. 1, of Behavior and Social Issues, the penultimate sentence should begin, “Mammalian examples are the intertwining of the alimentary and respiratory systems” rather than “the alimentary and digestive systems.” BSI regrets the error, which was introduced during editing.

IN APPRECIATION

Behaviorists for Social Responsibility wishes to acknowledge, with deep appreciation, substantial financial contributions from Peter A. Lamal, and Applied Behavior Consultants and Joseph Morrow, for the support of Behavior and Social Issues. Such contributions are important to the financial stability of the journal. Tax-exempt contributions can be made to Walden Fellowship, Inc., and mailed c/o Mark Mattaini, Behaviorists for Social Responsibility, JACSW (MC 309), 1040 W. Harrison St., Chicago, IL 60607. (Note that subscriptions are also meaningful contributions.)

NOTE TO READERS

Beginning with this issue of Behavior and Social Issues, a number of formatting changes have been made to enable us to include more content at less cost, including changes in font and spacing. Readers are asked to understand that these changes are being made to ensure the financial viability, and thus the survival, of the journal.
